Unfit, polluting vehicles to be phased out

PM Modi launches Vehicle Scrappage Policy; move to benefit auto sector

New Delhi, Aug. 14 (Agencies)- Prime Minister Narendra Modi launched a Vehicle Scrappage Policy. The Policy was first presented in the Union Budget 2021 by Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman. Soon after, Union Minister for Road, Transport and Highways Nitin Gadkari revealed the details of the Policy at a Lok Sabha Session and notified the new Vehicle Scrappage Policy. While the new Scrappage Policy is voluntary, it would require mandatory fitness tests for vehicles after a certain duration.

What is this Policy?: Much like the western countries, the Scrappage Policy comes into effect when a vehicle's registration is complete. In general, a passenger vehicle has a life of 15 years and a commercial vehicle has a life of 10 years, after which they become obsolete and also start polluting the environment at a greater intensity than they would have been doing earlier.

EDITOR'S BOTTOMLINE

In a post-pandemic world, policymakers will need to provide fiscal stimulus to boost labour demand in India's economy. Policies which incentivise firms to hire women can bring them into the paid workforce. However, gender inequality seems to be increasing with India's ranking on the gender inequality index plummeting over time. Among its neighbours, its position is only better than Pakistan and Afghanistan (World Economic Forum, 2021).

Bangladesh, with a lower per capita income than India, is doing significantly better in most indicators of gender equality including sex ratio at birth, female literacy rate, female labour force participation, gender wage equality, earned income of women and political representation of women. Among other policies, Bangladesh has made this progress due to women empowerment initiatives geared towards strengthening social acceptance of women's work. Therefore, investments in workplace interventions involving gender equality training by firms in India might be beneficial in improving their productivity and profits. Call centres can be a start. — Deepshikha Batheja in Hindustan Times

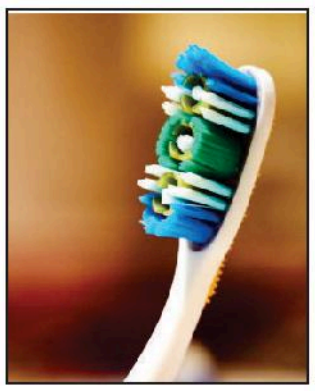
Search for hissing snake yields electric toothbrush



Singapore: Animal rescuers called to a Singapore home after a woman thought she heard a cobra hissing, rescued the resident from a malfunctioning electric toothbrush. The resident, Xi Yan, sent the team a recording of the noise she heard, and the rescuers determined it sounded like a black spitting cobra, a venomous species.

Animal welfare group ACRES said a team was dispatched to the Jurong West area on a report from a resident who heard what she thought could be a dangerous snake hissing in her bedroom.

The team searched Xi Yan's home for nearly an hour before Muhamad Safari Bin Masnor discovered the source of the hissing - an electric toothbrush. He turned the toothbrush on and off again, bringing an end to the hissing.

Goose flies upside down

Arnhem: here was some confusion when Amateur photographer Vincent Cornelissen posted an image of a goose flying upside on his Instagram page which had led to some confusions. This led many users to question what the bird was doing and if it was okay.

Vincent had clicked the photo of the goose while it was cruising upside down in Arnhem, Netherlands, in March.

A goose flying upside was just showing off to his mates, experts have said. The manoeuvre the bird was doing is known as whiffling and describes when birds rapidly descend and zig-zag, which is thought to be a defence against predators.

Cornelissen wrote: 'They do it to brag to their peers. Like, look at me!'

Bad roads and traffic violation

Sir,

It is with great concern that I would like to bring to notice of authorities concerned a few serious issues as a citizen of Mysuru.

1. Jodithenginamara Road in Bannimantap is dangerous for two-wheelers as trucks outrun any other vehicles with rash drivers! The road is regularly dug and closed with mud piles, overflowing manholes etc.

The road that connects to Shivarathreeshwara Nagar and the back gate of JSS College is a blind spot with many fatal accidents in recent times. The roads are filled with rundown sand and parked lorries on both sides of the road making thin two-way road. I request the authorities concerned to solving these issues at the earliest.

2. The road that connects Premier Studio to Aroma Bakery near the All India Institute of Speech and Hearing is filled with small pits and bumpy roads due to unscientific patchwork. It is difficult to ride in scooters without getting back pain. Many roads in city are filled in this form and cause great damage to us.

3. Some people have lost sense of road discipline, parking discipline, traffic rules, using indicators, avoiding overtake in narrow roads, honking unnecessarily for a long time with unusual sounds, using high beam flashlights on vehicles.

I request the traffic authorities to do the needful and reduce road accidents, fights and blocks. Hoping for a change.

OBESITY AND FATTY LIVER IN CHILDREN
In our country, the difference between being healthy and obese among children is a blur. A chubby child is what every parent wants. While undernutrition was a major problem in Indian children, nowadays, overnutrition is a new challenge especially with sedentary habits during the pandemic. Apart from being at risk of high blood pressure, cardiac diseases and diabetes in the future, the development of fatty liver is a real problem even in childhood. Children who are overweight and obese have an increased accumulation of fat in the liver. The prevalence of fatty liver in obese children is as high as 40%. An obese child is likely to become an obese adult and progression of fatty liver to hepatitis and then cirrhosis will occur. Fatty liver is becoming the leading cause of cirrhosis in young adults in the West. Thus, it has to be identified early and steps have to be taken for preventing progression. Every obese child has to undergo screening for fatty liver and the severity needs to be established. If appropriate measures are taken early, which include dietary modifications, physical exercise and medications based on the severity, the process of fat accumulation and liver damage can be reversed.
A healthy childhood paves the way to healthy adulthood.

Charred bodies of lovers found inside burnt car

Suicide pact shocks residents of tiny village in Kollegal

Srinivas

Kanchana

Yalandur, Aug. 14 (BCT)- Desperate to continue their relationship through marriage, two lovers ended lives in a disturbing way by sitting inside a car and then immolating after dousing themselves with petrol.

The horrific incident was reported on the banks of Theramballi Lake in Kollegal taluk last evening. Srinivas (27) and his lover Kanchana (25) took the extreme step as they had doubts that their families would not allow them to marry due to professional status.

Srinivas hailed from Mamballi village and he worked as a tractor driver while Kanchana, from the same village, was working as a Nurse at Chamarajanagar District Hospital. They were in a relationship for a couple of years and Srinivas was pressing Kanchana to marry him at the earliest.

Kanchana, however, was reluctant and was telling Srinivas to wait for some time as she had to build a house for her mother. But Srinivas had confided with his friends that though they belong to the same caste, Kanchana's family might not agree for the alliance as he is a tractor driver.

This was bothering Srinivas and he had attempted to commit suicide by hanging three months back. However, he was rescued by his family members who had found him to be depressed. They rushed him to a hospital where he survived.

Yesterday, Srinivas borrowed his uncle's Indica car and went to pick up Kanchana from Chamarajanagar Hospital and both of them arrived near Theramballi Lake. Srinivas then drove the vehicle onto the banks and locked the car doors.

The couple later doused themselves with petrol and as it was a pre-planned incident, Srinivas had bought petrol and had filled one or two bottles. Seeing smoke billowing out of the car, local villagers and passers-by alerted the Police. As the doors were locked, no way could either of the couple escape from fire. It is, however, not clear that if both Kanchana and Srinivas had entered into a suicide pact or any one of them being forced into the act.

Chamarajanagar SP G. Sangeetha, Additional SP Sundar Raj, Kollegal Dy.SP Nagaraj, Yalandur Circle Inspector Shivamadappa and staff visited the spot. A complaint in this regard has been filed by Kanchana's brother Karthik at Mamballi Police Station.

The process of handing over the MUDA developed layouts could be taken up. Before auctioning of CA sites, some plots should be given to set up hospital, waste segregation units, sports ground, Government offices and other offices.

Wit, Humour and Debate

On Wednesday, many witnessed ugly scenes in the Parliament as the Opposition members pushed and shoved marshals, tore papers, screamed and entered the Well of the House. Parliament sessions are where common sense, intellect, fact, wit and humour are deployed by leaders to prove their point, force a debate and change the opposing point of view.

Now all that we see is a bunch of people sitting around in a semi-circle screaming, like disinterested toddlers in a kindergarten classroom with short attention spans, poor comprehension and prone to screaming and kicking at the mildest slight.

Interestingly, Prime Minister Modi in 2014, speaking at the 'Outstanding Parliamentarian Awards' ceremony, observed, "Humour and wit are gradually fading away from Parliamentary proceedings as members are apprehensive as to what colour the 24x7 media would give to even one proverb they utter." Ok, but the PM has to wonder, can any politician today take a joke? Don't their bloated egos come in the way? So much so that they can't even handle cartoons.

It is not the 24x7 media that is preventing politicians from having wit or humour, it is the lack of intellect and an abundance of ego that prevents them from being witty or humorous.

Many may remember how the Congress boycotted Parliament after PM Modi used an analogy to say that Dr. Manmohan Singh was not corrupt but his Government was. To express this, he had said, "Dr. Sahab is the only person who knows the art of bathing in a bathroom with a raincoat on." This was enough for Congress to boycott work!

Compare this to Nehru. Socialist leader Ram Manohar Lohia once told the House that Nehru wasn't an aristocrat like he was made out to be and added saying, "I can prove that the Prime Minister's grandfather was a 'chaprasi' in the Mughal court." Back then, the Congress Party did not think of boycotting the Parliament. Instead their leader, Nehru, simply smiled and replied, "I am glad the honourable member has at last accepted what I have been trying to tell him for so many years. That I am a man of the people."

One of my favourite barbs in the Parliament is when the then Finance Minister T.T. Krishnamachari described Feroze Gandhi as Nehru's "lapdog." Feroze Gandhi replied that since Krishnamachari considered himself a pillar of the nation, he would do to him what a dog usually does to a pillar.

Speaking of dogs, once Piloo Mody, an MP from Swatantra Party and brother of Russi Mody, who was the Chairman of TATA Steel, got irritated with Congress MP J.C. Jain who kept interrupting him as he addressed the House. Finally, a frustrated Mody screamed, "Stop Barking." J.C. Jain immediately complained to the chair saying, "Sir, he is calling me a dog, it's unparliamentary." Piloo Mody apologised and said, "Ok then, stop Braying." Surprisingly, Jain did not object, and it stayed on record!

Many members back then did not have an ego like today's politicians and they even indulged in "self-deprecating humour" to make a point. An example being, when the 1962 war with China was being discussed in the Parliament and Nehru was being taken to task for losing Aksai Chin, he tried to underplay the importance of this area by saying that it was place where "not a blade of grass grows." To this, his own party man, Congress MP Mahavir Tyagi, stood up, pointed at his own bald head and asked, "Not a hair grows on my head. Does it mean it should be cut off and given to China too?"

Those were the days when party leaders were not men with fragile egos, they were men with strong intellect who understood wit and got the bigger point being made.

Sometimes a witty reply can make the point and change decisions, like it happened in the case of C. Rajagopalachari who served as Home Affairs Minister.

While discussing a matter of foreign policy, Rajaji, as he was fondly called, disagreed with a proposal made by Nehru and put forth his own proposal which he felt was better. To this, Nehru said, "You see Rajaji, the majority is with me." To which Rajaji replied, "Yes, Jawaharlal, the majority is with you, but the logic is with me." Nehru agreed and accepted Rajaji's proposal!

Former President K.R. Narayanan once said a Legislature ought to be an exciting place reverberating with debates and arguments and scintillating with wit and humour. In fact, Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha websites have got a section called "Humour & Wit, Poetry & Couplets" ! Also there is a Secretary General who is in-charge of publishing a special book filled with couplets, poems and moments of wit and humour that occurs in the Parliament! Sadly there are just 3 incidents of humour recorded in the past three years!

Without humour, wit and intellect there can be no debate or discussion in a political space, because if you have wit and humour then ego will stay at the door and discussion will come to the fore. You will make space for the "other view."

Today where is the debate, where is the intellect to grasp the bigger picture? For now, yes, the Lok Sabha may have a section for 'Wit & Humour, Poetry & Couplets'", it may even have a General Secretary sitting in Room 131-B of Parliament House recording them. But going by what he has recorded in recent times, all that we can say is instead of a "humour secretary" the Parliament needs a Parliamentary etiquette coach so that our leaders develop wit, humour and the ability to debate and discuss issues instead of pushing marshals and shoving Bills down our throats.

Highlighting the benefits of Lok Adalat, Judge Raghunath said that the litigants will save a lot of time and money by getting their cases settled amicably. Stating that the Union Government launched the concept of Lok Adalat in 1987 with the introduction of Legal Services Authority Act,1987, he said that the litigants were asked to register for the Lok Adalat either physically/online/video-conference/ Mail/ SMS/WhatsApp/ Electronic Mode with the DLSA.

Principal District and Sessions Court Judge M.L. Raghunath, who inaugurated the Lok Adalat at District Courts Complex in city this morning, seen addressing as others look on.

Continuing, he said that the Lok Adalat is being collectively held in 69 Benches of Courts in the district, which included 39 in the City Courts alone. Maintaining that there is no fee for taking part in the Lok Adalat, he said that cases once settled here, is final and binding on both the contesting parties and cannot be challenged in any other court.

DC gives permission for Lok Adalat amidst weekend curfew

With the 56-hour weekend curfew (from 9 pm on Aug.13 till 5 am on Aug.16) in place in Mysuru district, the Office of the Deputy Commissioner (DC) on Friday issued a letter giving special permission for the conduct of the Lok Adalat with a set of conditions which are mentioned below:

All those taking part in the Lok Adalat have to mandatorily wear face mask, should compulsorily register their name and mobile number and undergo thermal screening at the entrance of Courts. Those displaying symptoms such as fever, cold, cough, breathing problems etc., are barred from attending and such persons should be immediately reported to the District Control Room Toll-free No.1077. The other conditions included maintenance of physical distancing, besides all other necessary measures for maintaining cleanliness and hygiene in the premises.

In western countries, these old vehicles are sent to scrapyards where they are dismantled and the steel used for making the body is crushed and recycled again. In India though, there was no such policy. Most of the vehicles either are on run currently polluting the environment or are lying at road sides.

Getting off older vehicles will generate space for new vehicles, which will boost the sales in the otherwise battered and bruised Indian auto industry. Nitin Gadkari explained that once the registration of the vehicles is over, they will have to take a mandatory fitness test. However, they can also avail scrapping options.

What is the time limit?

Not all vehicles will be scrapped as this is a voluntary scheme and not a mandatory one. However, there's a catch here. All vehicles over and above the time limit will have to undergo mandatory fitness tests. If a vehicle fails a fitness test, they will not get a renewal certificate and won't be able to run on the road.

However, if they pass a fitness test, they will have to undergo a fitness test after every 5 years again to show their road worthiness.

What are the benefits?

1) A scrap value of the ex-showroom price of vehicle ranging from 4-6 percent will be given to the owner if they choose to scrap the vehicle

2) A rebate of up to 25 percent will be given in Road Tax

3) Vehicle manufacturers will be advised to give 5 percent discount on new vehicles against a scrapping certificate

4) No registration fees for vehicles.

What is a fitness test?

A fitness test, much like Pollution Under Control (PUC) certificate test, determines the road worthiness of a vehicle and checks if the vehicle is harming the environment. But that's one aspect of it. Various other tests like brake test, engine performance among others will be in place to check the quality of the vehicles.

A fitness test, according to Nitin Gadkari, will be conducted at automated fitness centres. These centres will be established under PPP model and it is estimated that each fitness test will set you back by at least Rs. 30,000-40,000 and a green cess will also be levied while renewing the vehicle registration. The Government is hoping that all these additional costs will dissuade vehicle owners from retaining the vehicle.

What happens if a vehicle fails a fitness test?

The vehicle will not be given a renewed registration certificate which means the vehicle is not registered to run on the road. As per the MV Act, it's illegal to drive a car without a RC. Reports suggest that one can undertake a fitness test only three times post which the vehicle will anyways won't be road-worthy.

Policy applicable date

While the policy has been launched by PM Modi today, it will take time to implement the policy on the ground level as scrapping centres are not ready yet. From 2023 onwards, heavy commercial vehicles need to be scrapped if they do not conform to the fitness level prescribed under the rules. For personal vehicles, there is a plan to implement from June 2024.

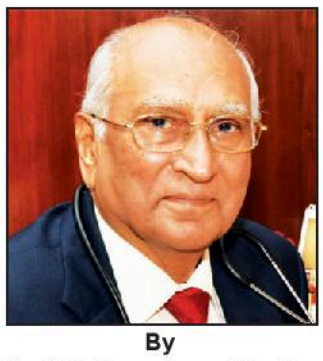
How the British won India

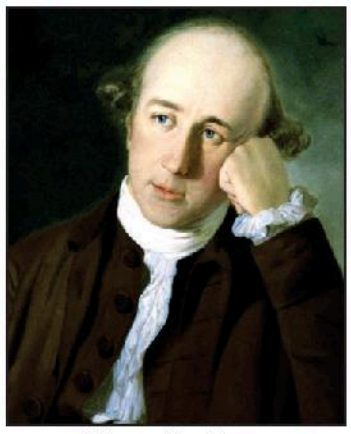


By
Dr. C.D. Sreenivasa Murthy

Study the past if you would define the future. — Confucius

Those who don't know history are doomed to repeat it.—Edmund Burke

Nawab Siraj-ud-Daulah



Warren Hastings

Robert Clive

Indian cotton clothes, silks, spices and Indigo dye were in great demand throughout Europe during the middle ages. This trade was the monopoly of Arab merchants as they alone knew the sea route to India. The discovery of the ocean way to India by Vasco da Gama in1498 made European nations think of trading themselves and making profits. East India Company was incorporated in London on 31.12.1600.

After some time it received the Royal charter from the English King giving it a monopoly of trade and even powers to wage war. Soon the Company established trading posts in Surat, Bombay, Chennai and Bengal. These were called factories. After the death of Aurangzeb in 1707, the Mughal power started waning and there was a sense of anarchy. The Company started raising armies to protect its factories.

Siraj-ud-Daulah was the Nawab of the vast territory of Bengal. He was an incompetent and cruel ruler. He could not collect the land revenues through his Government officers efficiently and had outsourced it to the house of Jagat Seth, who was a marwari Jain banker and financier. Seth was very effective in collecting land revenues and hence controlled the finances and treasury of the Nawab. Jagat Seth was the title given to him as he was thought to be the wealthiest person in the world. He had a network of a large number of associates all over India. Since the Nawabs could not send the annual revenues to the Mughal emperor in Delhi as it would be looted on the way by the robbers, they entrusted Jagat Seth to remit the annual Diwani.

Jagat Seth could send money to anywhere in the country without actually transporting the cash, through the system of hundis and would deliver large amounts of cash to the emperor's treasury in Delhi. Siraj-ud-Daulah was a spendthrift and often his treasury would be empty. Once he demanded Jagat Seth to lend a huge sum of money for a military campaign and was furious when Seth pleaded his inability. He slapped him in the open court and insulted him. This richest man in the world felt humiliated and decided to take his revenge. Seth offered a bribe of twenty million pounds (more than a thousand crore rupees in today's value) to Robert Clive to defeat the Nawab. Clive accepted the challenge and defeated Siraj-ud-Daulah at the Battle of Plassey in 1757. Robert Clive bribed Mir Jafar, Commander-in-Chief of Siraj-ud-Daulah with the promise of making him the next Nawab which resulted in his betrayal and victory for the British.

A few years later in 1764, at the Battle of Buxar, Company forces defeated the allied forces of the Mughal emperor and the Emperor Shah Alam had to cede the Diwani (revenue collections) of Bengal to the Company. The Company became the real ruler of Bengal, which was the biggest province of the Mughal Kingdom comprising the present day West Bengal, Bangladesh, Bihar and Orissa. This was the beginning of the Indian Empire of the East India Company.

Revenue collections of Bengal were enormous and made the Company hugely rich. Clive was followed by many Governors like Warren Hastings and Cornwallis. All these people made large profits for the Company and personal fortunes for themselves. In addition they were Empire builders and expanded the empire for the East India Company. The defeat of Tipu Sultan in 1799 by Arthur Wellesley almost completed the formation of the East India Company Empire of India.

East India Company Offices, London.

The Company built a formidable Army of Indian soldiers who were called sepoys. The soldiers were paid well and trained by the British officers with latest European techniques, guns and cannons, and were far superior to the forces of Indian Princes. The Company officers had developed an extensive intelligence network and had their spies all over the country. This system was so good it is said that when Haider Ali died during a campaign, the Company Governor of Madras came to know the matter earlier than his son Tipu Sultan.

Wars are always very expensive and need large amounts of money. The Indian Princes as well as the Company had to borrow funds from the big financiers of Surat, Varanasi, Patna, Murshidabad and Dacca which were the financial centres of Hindoostan. The Indian Princes, when they could not repay the loans, would either imprison or hang the money-lenders. The Company too was a borrower of enormous amounts of cash from these big Indian bankers, but it always paid the interest and repaid the capital promptly and treated these rich financiers with respect and honour. Calcutta provided safety, efficient law and order and slowly the big financiers migrated there. They were ever willing to lend to the Company and finance its wars.

East India Company is the first great multinational in the business history of the world. At the height of its power, it accounted for nearly 40 percent of world trade. It exported Indian materials like cotton, silk, Indigo and textiles to England, Chinese tea to America and opium to China and in later years imported British manufactured goods. The rapacious and callous attitude of the Company and the corruption of its officers caused many scandals and debates were held in British Parliament. But the Company managed to get out of them because half the members of the Parliament owned shares in the Company, probably the first example of corporate lobbying and corruption. The Company had a large army of more than two and a half lakh sepoys while the mother country England had an army half the size.

The Company's administration was one of exploitation without a social conscience and when the great famine occurred in 1770, nearly five million Bengalis died. The Company did not make any effort to help the people and instead the officers ruthlessly collected land revenue and sent it to their office in London. The Company ruled most of India for 100 years from the Battle of Plassey in 1757 to the Sepoy Mutiny in 1857. During this Mutiny, the whole of North India was in conflagration. The rebellious Sepoys killed a few thousand British officers, their families and children. When finally the Mutiny was subdued in 1857, the Company officers in revenge ordered the killing, shooting and hanging of nearly eight lakh people whom they suspected to be collaborators of the rebellious soldiers. This became a matter of great disrepute in England and the British Parliament finally decided to take over the governance of the Empire from the Company, or in other words nationalised the Indian assets of the Company. Later, Queen Victoria was proclaimed the Empress of Indian Empire.

The British King, the British Government and the British Army did not win India. The Company had risen from a trading venture to a military power and the ruler of a vast empire of two hundred million people. East India Company had won and governed India for a 100 years by bribery, deceit and with help of Indian money, Indian financiers, Indian soldiers and Indian Civil Servants. At the time of Emperor Aurangzeb's death in 1707, India was the richest nation on earth and contributed 42 percent of world GDP. Bengal was its largest and wealthiest province. When the British took over the governance of India from the East India Company in 1858, India had been reduced to one of the poorest countries on the globe and Bengal was its poorest province.

Whenever a strong central power crumbles and a large number of smaller breakaway kingdoms emerge and start squabbling, time will be ripe for an alien power to step in and conquer. It is an irony of fate that a small corporate body with a staff of 35 people in remote London sixteen thousand miles away subjugated and governed this subcontinent which was the home of mighty empires like the Mauryas, the Cholas, the Vijayanagar and the Mughals. On the day of our Independence, let us not forget how we lost our precious freedom.

'I want every youth to become a Soldier'

Martyrs and families easily forgotten after paying 21-round gun salute

Once a soldier always a soldier, goes a famous proverb. And for a soldier, the nation always comes first, followed by family and then friends, even when he is on leave. One man who exemplifies this adage is Yodha Ravi from Mysuru.

Next time when you visit the Oval Grounds opposite the Crawford Hall at around 5 am, you will hear a bunch of voices calling out on top of their voice "Bharat Mata Ki Jai," "Vande Mataram" and "Jai Hind." More than 30 youngsters aged between 18 and 21 — carrying dreams of joining the Indian Army — are being trained by Yodha Ravi.

He is imparting the training for free for his leave period of three months and Ravi has been doing this since the last 12 days. His dream is to inspire every Karnataka youth to join the Indian Army. Along with Army training, Ravi is also providing Police force training.

Forty-year-old Yodha Ravi, who is serving in the Army for more than two decades, is a resident of Janathanagar in Mysuru. His father Ramanna (now late) was a KSRTC bus driver. He completed schooling in Sadvidya High School and PUC at Vidyavardhaka PU College. After completing BA from Maharaja's College, he did his Master's in History from Karnataka State Open University.His wife M. Suma, two daughters Raksha and Prateeksha stay in Janathanagar. A proud father says Raksha was born on Aug. 15, 2010.

Developing patriotic feelings from a young age, he joined the Army in April 2000 and entered the Military force in September same year. Ravi's recent posting is in Lucknow, Uttar Pradesh and he is a Havildar (physical trainer, weapon trainer and also drill instructor).

Sharing his views with Star of Mysore on the eve of 75th Independence Day, he said, "I want to make every youth of this country a soldier. The current generation is less patriotic and most of them aspire to work in MNC companies, earning salaries in dollars. It's rare that we find youngsters showing interest in joining the Army. Celebrating while the Indian team wins any cricket match or a gold medal at the Olympics is not patriotism. Fighting for the country, standing at the borders in adverse conditions is true patriotism."

Families of martyrs must get respect

The Government and people easily forget family members of martyrs after paying the 21-round gun salute during the last rites. Firstly, the Government should provide employment and free education to the dependants. Most importantly, the wife and children of martyr soldiers should get equal respect. Also jobs must be given to retired servicemen in educational institutions, he said.

Karnataka's contribution

Karnataka's contribution to the country is immense. Someone needs to push it harder and show it to the world that every Kannadiga is a soldier. Karnataka will become a 'Sainika Rajya' one day as more and more youngsters will join the Army, he hoped.

"Bhagat Singh died for the country when he was just 23 and now he is forgotten. There is no single building, stadium or airport named after him while politicians keep their own names to parks and stadiums. India now needs a revolution as there is corruption in every field. We need another revolutionary like Bhagat Singh," Ravi said.

Over 30 students from different parts of the State are being trained under Ravi. Yuvaraj, a 19-year-old student from Koppal said, "It's my fifth day in the training camp and I am already feeling like a soldier as the training is vigorous and needs stamina. The training looks simple but as time passes, exercises become gruelling."

Chandrashekar, a 20-year-old Kalaburagi native said, "My dream is to join the Police force. We enjoy the training sessions every day and we also hear stories from Ravi on his experiences on the Jammu & Kashmir border."

"We have seen military training in movies and now we are experiencing the hardship of the same. I always wanted to join the military as I am from the district which has given a large number of soldiers to the country," said 20-year-old Pavan from Kodagu.

Yodha Ravi has been a part of many operations like Surankote Operation in 2005 and Kupwara Operation same year in J&K. 2012-14 Leh Operation in Ladakh and 2018-2020 on the Arunachal Pradesh-Assam Border. Ravi claimed that he has trained about 3,000 students out of which more than 1,000 have been selected for the Army and over 500 to Air Force, Navy and the Police.

Ravi has given free military training for youths in other places like K.R. Nagar, Bengaluru, Uttar Pradesh and Assam also.

The first session in Ravi's training is from 5 am to 8 am and the second session from 5 pm to 8 pm. Interested candidates can contact Ravi on Mob: 75799-77851 to take part in the training that will continue till Oct. 30.

Maartalli makes a mark in training youths

Meanwhile, at Maartalli in Chamarajanagar district, a group of retired soldiers is striving to reclaim the village's distinction of being a 'Yodhara Grama' (Soldiers' Village) as more than 100 soldiers from this tiny village bordering Tamil Nadu are serving the defence forces.

Retired soldiers have opened a training centre to train Army-aspiring youths. They have formed Army Association Trust and it is run with the financial contribution made by retired soldiers and the ones who are serving the Armed Forces. The Trust has taken one acre land near Sulwadi Government Hospital for a lease of Rs. 2 lakh and has been training youths. Five ex-servicemen are providing the training to meet the Army standards.

It may be recalled, Star of Mysore had published a feature article titled 'For youths of Maartalli in Chamarajanagar serving Nation is serving God' on May 3, 2021. The Trust can be contacted on Mob: 95358-70900.
